Simultaneous micro X-ray fluorescence and diffraction (μ-XRF & μ-XRD respectively) have been used to characterize oil sands mineralogical tailings samples. Maps of elemental and crystalline phase composition can be used to correlate compositional and structural differences and provide insight into the location of trace elements.